

Behavioral Threat Assessment Training – CSTAG

Multidisciplinary team threat assessment training developed and delivered in exclusive partnership with leading behavioral threat assessment expert Dr. Dewey Cornell.

Provide your multidisciplinary threat assessment teams with evidence-based training

Reduce student violence and self-harm in schools

Ensure your teams use consistent terms and processes to improve outcomes

We provide training on the CSTAG model, ensuring your team's ability to improve outcomes for students with concerning behaviors. Additionally, this training aligns directly to our Behavioral Threat & Suicide Case Management software.

- Blended learning format provides flexibility for time-constrained team members with practical application exercises and scenarios to ensure comprehension of methodology
- Methodologies are incorporated directly into our case management system
- Exclusive partnership with renowned industry expertise and evidence-based leading methodologies to drive successful outcomes of students receiving CSTAG assessments were able to return to their school.

School districts have a responsibility to create an environment in which students are safe, secure and free from harm to optimize learning.

Methodology

BTA training provides a consistent, evidence-based methodology and assessment model for early identification, assessment and response to potential threats

Training aligns to the nationally recognized CSTAG threat assessment model to help teams connect the dots and reduce the incidence of violent acts

Blended Learning

Blended learning format provides a mix of eLearning and instructor-led scenario and case management exercises to ensure comprehension and knowledge retention

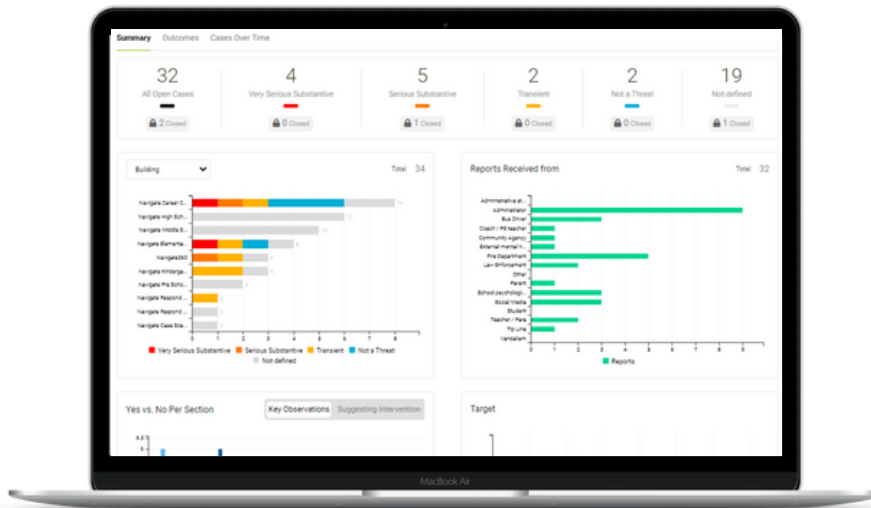

Improved comprehension, optimized learning and streamlined communication for multidisciplinary teams

Alignment

Training is focused on teams, ensuring better alignment in functional roles, easier implementation of the program across the district and improved collaboration

The result is an optimal team capable of consistent processes while steering more students onto a path of safety
